MURDERER'S FATHER KILLED YESTERDAY

T. W. HYDE KNOCKED FROM TRACK OF INTERURBAN

NECK WAS BROKEN

Piedmont & Northern Car Struck Piece of Scantling Carried By Aged Man

(From Wednesday's Daily)
T. W. Hyde of Pelzer, 65 years of age, was killed yesterday afternoon at 1:15 o'clock as he was walking along the tracks of the Piedmont & Northern lines. The accident occurred near Smyth's station and when the aged man was struck he evidently did not have time to know what had hit him. Death must have been instantaneous.

Mr. Hyde was carrying a piece of scantling across his shoulders as he was walking along the track and while he was not directly on the track, the timber protruded across. When the car struck the stick it either caused the scantling to break Mr. Hyde's neck or this happened when he fell into a ravine near-by, many feet in depth.

The car was in charge of Conductor W. R. Thackston while Motorman W. D. Mauldin was at the throttle. It was clearly impossible for either of these men to prevent the accident.

One of the most interesting features in connection with the case is the fact that the dead man was the father of Sam Hyde, who was the first man in South Carolina to die in the electric chair. Hyde was convicted in the Anderson county court of having killed his wife and father-in-law at the Orr Mills and was sentenced to die just before the electric chair system was inaugurated in the state. By his own request Hyde was allowed the privilege of being the first man to enter the death chamber to take his punishment by the new system.

Following the occurrence of yesterday Coroner Black of Greenville, went to Pelzer as did Sheriff Ashley of Anderson. The coroner held an inquest yesterday afternoon and the jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased was killed by an electric car. No blame was attached to the Piedmont & Northern lines.

Mr. Hyde is survived by four sons, Silar, George, Paul and Arthur Hyde.

REPORTED RAPE CASE STIRRED WILLIAMSTON

PEOPLE SEEMED TO HAVE BEEN UNDULY ALARMED

NEGRO AS USUAL

Because Man Shook Blinds Early Yesterday Morning, Report Current of Foul Crime

(From Wednesday's Daily)
People are always too ready to become excited over insignificant events and this proved to be true in regard to a happening at Williamston yesterday. It was rumored that an attempt had been made at rape in that place early yesterday morning and excitement prevailed around the town for some time. The report was later found to be without foundation and people regretted their rash talk.

An interview was secured last night by The Intelligencer with officials at Williamston and it seemed that the entire report started from the fact that a negro man yesterday morning approached the home of a well known cotton mill man in Williamston and when he reached the part of the house where a lady was asleep he rattled the window blinds. It is believed that his action was without significance as he made no further attempt to enter the house.

This happened about 8:30 o'clock yesterday morning and when it was reported to the police the at once began a search for the negro. They finally arrested George Nance but when he proved an alibi he was released.

It was said last night that they had finally apprehended the negro, but discovered that he was crazy and a character well known around Williamston.

The entire incident is already almost forgotten in Williamston.

It is understood the purchasers were the original owners.

The St. Lawrence was built at Saginaw, Mich., where it has been used up for a week by the Canadian Pacific railway company.

The press against the boiler was so great that it was forced to give way.
